

Construction to begin on Charles St. overpass

by Janet Cooke

Unbeknownst to the general public, the construction work in the Dell Building area was not part of the new student center. It was not even a part of a stunt to be seen on "That's Incredible" starring Evil Kneval. It was, however, the new Charles Street ramp that was moved into place by thousands and thousands of ROTC's like many ants whistling "Bridge Over the River Kwai." It was a tremendous effort. A silent moving of tons and tons of interlocking steel and concrete that took place last night.

The whole operation was kept under tight security so as not to draw attention to the fact that it was long overdue. The new ramp will be a major safety feature to the Charleston residents. But some of the students are much annoyed. "I think $25.00 is just too much," said an irate underclassman. He is referring of course to the $25.00 permit that a resident needs to display on the right rear pocket of his or her jeans in order to get across the ramp without a ticket. Unregistered students or those who improperly display the sticker will be in violation of the new Loyola College pedestrian regulations. Stopping or standing on the bridge is also prohibited.

Of course one could always opt to take the Dennis Olver Memorial Bus which will get you to the apartments a little bit slower. The bus will exit the north gate and then proceed north to the Cathedral of Mary Our Queen. It will then head south so it can make the right turn into the apartments without waiting for traffic. "Why does it have to go to the cathedral?" is the question asked by the underclassmen.

"It goes to the cathedral to reenact the useless gesture of a year ago when commuters were supposed to park there and ride the bus to school like so many elementary school kids," said an administrative aid. "We wanted residents and commuters to feel that we were genuinely concerned about showing them ways to make money off of each other," he continued.

The general consensus, however, is that most students would like their money to go to placing a plaque on the ramp that honors the first person killed at the crossing: "For Dennis, Somewhere Olver the Charles Street."

"The rules are only a way to keep campus security people employed," said a spokesman for the college. Since the new parking lot under the athletic field can be patrolled with one guard and the aid of the closed circuit t.v., there are no more jobs for the security personnel.

"Just when they were learning how to spell the names of the cars," said one concerned commuter.

If you would like to visit a friend, you can apply for a visitor's sticker which is good for 3 days and only costs $5.00.

"We feel that the price is reasonable because it eliminates the construction of a toll booth on either side of the new ramp," said the

Pippin cast goes blind; performance cancelled

by J. R. Cooke

We regret to announce that Pippin has been cancelled due to an unfortunate accident. The cast and crew are suffering from a temporary case of blindness and have been hospitalized until their vision improves.

The bright yellow Pippin T-shirts which were worn on campus by the cast have been determined as the cause, and consequently have been confiscated and burned to prevent further corneal damage.

"I noticed something was wrong when I started seeing doubles of Dr. Scheye this morning in English class," remembers Patty Gutierrez, director of the show, "but I thought it was because of last night's hangover. Then I started complimenting all my friends on their yellow clothes. When I asked my best friend, a brunette, why she bleached her hair blond, she gave me a funny look and told me to go to the nurse. Well, sure enough, when I got there, I saw a whole slew of Pippin people wearing yellow T-shirts who had the same problem."

The only cast member who was able to salvage her sight was Bev Serio, who was not wearing the T-shirt. "My dog had an accident on it last night, so I had to throw it away," she explained. "Since I was the only healthy person left, I volunteered to go on with the show. But the directors didn't think I could replace Pippin in the orgy scene. Personally, I think I can wiggle as well as anyone else in the cast."

Some teachers allegedly threw Pippin cast members out of class because of the visual distraction. While most of them complied to their teacher's demands, some protested. Chris Walters, who plays Pippin's mother, opted to take off the offensive T-shirt rather than have to miss out on a lecture. The embarrassed teacher reportedly threw his jacket over the exposed Ms. Walters, to the amusement of her fellow classmates.

Several innocent students who had contact with the T-shirt wearers complained of slight blurriness in vision. "It felt like after you've looked at the sun too long," said one sophomore.

Lake Sellinger underway for Sailing, Scuba Clubs

by Beaver Cooke

The pond behind the Loyola-Notre Dame Library will be dredged to a depth of forty feet, and will be widened considerably to accommodate the needs of Loyola's Sailing and Scuba Clubs, according to J. Paul Melanson, Vice-President for Administration and Finance. The project will start sometime this summer.

"How wide we make it depends on the nuns," Melanson says. "We'd make their whole campus into a lake if we could, but our lawyers say that could give us some legal trouble."

Melanson says that the new lake, to be called Lake Sellinger, in honor of the College's President, will extend at least to the base of the hill at the edge of Notre-Dame's campus.

Fr. Sellinger has said that if the lake project is not completed by September 3, 1983, he will don a Greyhound costume and will doggie paddle across the finished portion of the lake.

In addition to the dredging, an actual coral reef will be imported from the Marianas Islands in the Pacific for exploration by the Scuba Club. Ed Ross, Faculty Advisor of the Scuba Club, says he is relieved finally to have on-campus facilities. "The swim team was getting touchy about the snorkels," he says.

The Sailing Club, too, is excited about having an on-campus lake. To complement their planned fleet of eight sailboats, the club also hopes to purchase two catamarans and a 35-foot yacht. Fr. Sellinger has said that an official college yacht might "come in handy."

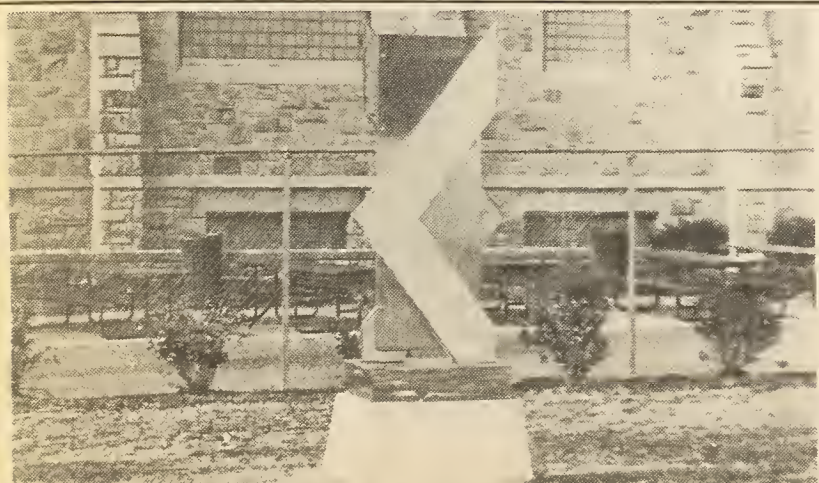

This would be especially true if Melanson's dream of dredging Charles Street as an access channel to Baltimore's Inner Harbor becomes a reality.

"They (the city) gave us some crap about zoning laws, but don't think it can't be done," Melanson warns.

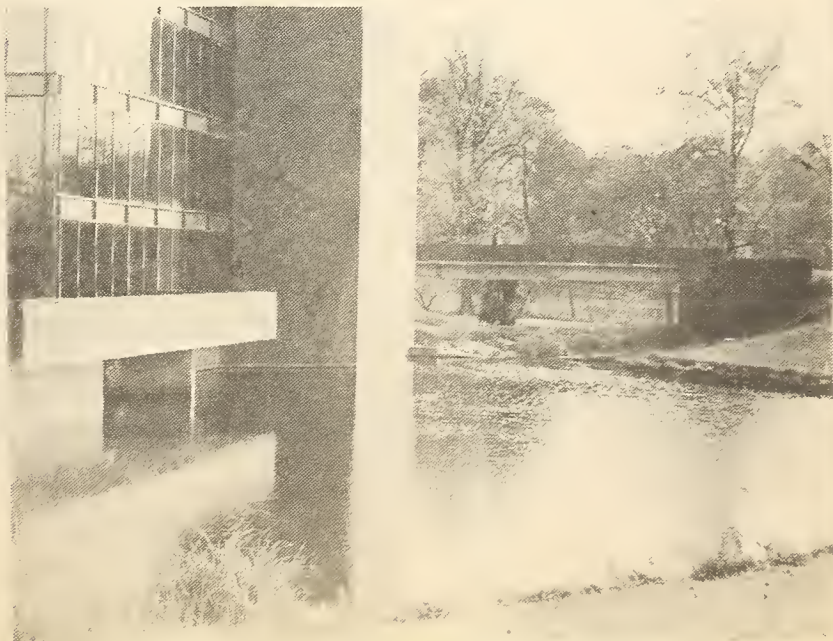

The local neighborhood planning association has already objected to the plan, saying they don't want "the hustle and bustle of a thriving port right outside our front doors."

Others in the Loyola administration have objected to the site where the dredged waste will be dumped. "I don't think it's a nice thing

NAME-THE-SCULPTURE CONTEST! What is it? Where did it come from? How can we get rid of it? If you have answers to any or all of these questions, leave them in the box marked CONTEST found on Fr. Sellinger's doorstep. Contest ends April 1, 1985.

The site of Project Lake Sellinger can be found behind the Loyola/Notre Dame Library. Dredging will begin this summer.

Loyola food fight honors John Belushi

by Wally Cooke

The First Annual John Belushi Memorial Food Fight will be held in the Andrew White Student Center Tuesday, April 6 during Activity Period. Assistant Director for the Student Center Kent Workman has announced.

Students wishing to participate in the food fight will be able to purchase, at a substantial discount, food donated by SAGA. "Better splattered on the walls than in the kids' stomachs," Vice-President for Student Affairs Joseph Yanchik commented.

The money raised will be given to Workman's infant John Belushi Memorial Fund. "Eventually I want to build a museum to preserve all of John's worldly possessions for posterity," Workman explained. "I shiver with excitement every time I imagine John's razors, eye drops, Batman underwear and hypodermic needles preserved for all eternity."

Workman is planning to

sponsor food fights all over the country to build up the memorial fund. "I hope to start building the museum by Spring 1985," he said.

Workman hinted that a "Remember John Telethon" may also be in the works, but would not say for certain.

Shock at Belushi's death, and reverence for the great comedian prompted the creation of the John Belushi Memorial Fund, Workman said.

"He (Belushi) was my favorite," Workman said. "No, he was more of a hero to me... especially in Animal House. That one scene reminded me of the time I fell off a ladder doing something similar and hit my head. Boy, did that hurt! Why do football players always have to live on the third floor?"

Workman has devoted several hours a day to this and other Belushi-related projects over the weeks since the celebrity's death. He has conducted over half a dozen seances in his office in an attempt to tell the late comedian of his plans for the museum.

"It doesn't leave much time for my job," Workman admitted, "but they never let me do all that much anyway."

Saga: A sip and slurp to gourmet delight

by Laura Webber Baldwin Spencer Cooke and Lucas Lorenzo Croke

Yes, one of the most talked about dining spots this side of Towson finally gets what it had coming to it. Loyola's famous Greyhound restaurant reviewers followed their noses right into the Student Center one day only to discover the culinary delights inside the school's reknowned cafeteria. We immediately recognized that, to insure proper organization and cleanliness, the "Saga Food" service team allows each customer to pick up his/her own utensils before entering. Trays are provided so as to mark one's food as off-limits to other hungry hands; an ingenious "laissez-faire" approach to the system.

Upon entering, the volume of growling stomachs increased as students peeked at the various food displays.

We chose a good day to dine at "Saga Foods;" le chef de maison provided a choice of six different entrees and vegetables at the hot food section. These were offered along with the regular juicy steak burgers, tempting cold-cut sandwiches, crispy salads, and tantalizing desserts.

Each hot entree was covered with a thick cheese crust-Gruyere or Romana, no doubt-so as to insure the element of surprise characteristic of most fine restaurants; a definite plus for the Saga food team.

Hot entrees and vegetables were also placed under warm red bulbs, no doubt to further sanitize the aromatic morsels. We chose the tender meatloaf with cheese crusted mashed potatoes, mixed peas and carrots as a vegetable.

As we strode past the hot sandwich counter, we noticed the conscientiousness of the cooks, for they would ask three or four times to make sure they heard the order correctly. Impressive!

To go with the meatloaf and potatoes entree we chose a crispy salad and dessert. The desserts featured were fine French pastries, aged, we were told, to achieve a full flavor bouquet. Ingenious!

Our delight continued as we approached the salad-dressing counter. What a unique place; does their talent never end? "Saga Food's" team even makes homemade dressings. The container marked "Italian Dressing" contained a chunky green mixture, sure to please the palate; the "mayonnaise" container contained an oil and vinegar based liquid substance with red pepper and seasonings; an interesting try, but not quite up to par with the mayonnaises we have known and tasted; and in the "French Dressing" container we found a thick, brownish, pasty substance with a vaguely familiar aroma. We chose this "French Dressing" to top off our tossed salads with--if they're brave enough to make this new and tantalizing flavor, we're brave enough to try it!

And yet another measure for sanitary protection is implemented in the "Saga Food" system. On one's way out, drinks may be picked up neatly and efficiently through separate machines. Dare not take a sip, however, or you will be promptly approached with an extra charge towards the sanitary funds.

Our unfamiliar faces were spotted too easily by the alert cashiers, so when she asked "Cash?" we pulled out our American Express cards, held them up and smiled, but she didn't. No fear; we like to use cash the first time around at a fine establishment such as this.

Just in case the waitresses and waiters out in the dining hall neglected to place them at our table, the cashier kindly handed us each one clean napkin. No skimping here.

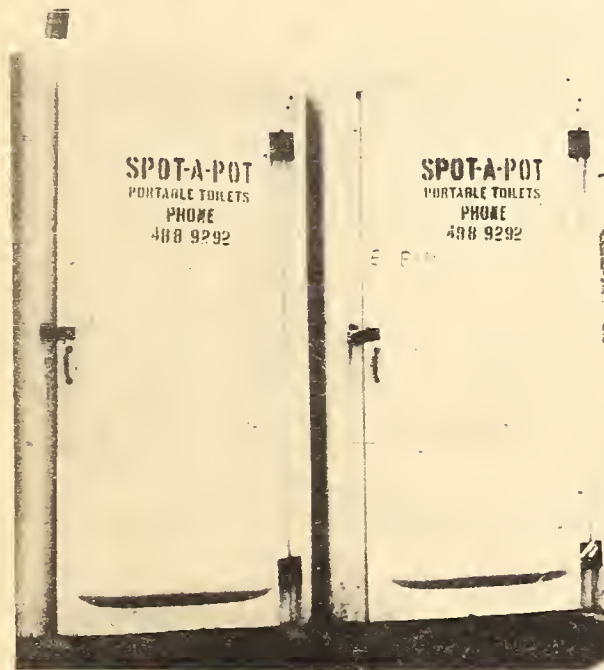

We found the meatloaf to be so tender that it fell apart in millions of little pieces as soon as we began to slice; the peas and carrots were so fresh... that they literally squished on our forks and melted in our mouths; the potatoes were of a curiously thick consistency, due we guessed to the abundant amount of fine Idahoan potatoes used--real rib stickers! The French dressing flavor was a little odd for our tastes, and caused the salad to stick together in a thick clump... well, we were a little full anyhow. The fifty-cent soda we chose was enough for just one quick sip--no waste here!

In order to leave a bit of the surprise element in it for our readers, especially those who plan to try "Saga Foods" in the future, we will not print the final rating for service, food, atmosphere, and prices. You be the judge!

Andrews plots to regain presidential power

by Kinky Cooke

George Andrews, ASLC resident for the past two years, was upset that his name was removed from the ballot in the recent student government elections.

"Just because I will not be here next year does not mean that I will not be able to continue my duties as your ASLC president," Andrews said.

"I have accomplished a great deal during my unprecedented two-year tenure here. Besides, the Leadership Manual isn't finished yet. I have so much to do. I thought Joe Jordan (the ASLC Election Commissioner) was my friend."

Jordan was surprised to see Andrews' name on the ballot.

"I just assumed that George knew you can't be president after you graduate," Jordan explained.

Andrews said that he wanted to be president of the ASLC for just "one more year, to complete my work on the Leadership Manual."

Andrews' Leadership Manual, in fact, has been the subject of much controversy. Several history professors have charged that Andrews' Manual contains allusions to, and even direct quotes from, Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf". "The man's a Neo-Nazi, plain and simple," says Dr. Stephen Reges, Chairman of the History Department.

"He (Andrews) quotes an entire passage from 'Mein Kampf' at one point," Reges charges, "except that everywhere it says 'Aryan' he substitutes 'Lebanese.'"

"Nobody will ever be able to manage the ASLC effectively unless he has unlimited, unquestionable authority. I'm only trying to do what's best for the ASLC."

The other week, a security guard caught Andrews doing what he thought was "best for the ASLC"—setting fire to the Ahern apartment complex. "He told me he thought it was the Reichstag," the security guard said.

No one knows what Andrews' next move to regain power in the ASLC will be, but some of his recent statements have frightened and confused many. At an ASLC Administrative Council meeting last week, Andrews stood up and screamed "When Hindenburg dies, then you'll all be sorry!"

A special task force was hired by Loyola College to expose the root of the Loyola preppie. Much to their surprise, four species were discovered. A special prepicide will be sprayed throughout the campus starting Monday.

ONE-THOUSAND EXTRA SPACES PLANNED TO EASE COMMUTER PARKING

by Kitty Cooke

Bulldozers and a wrecking crew are scheduled to dig up the 2-year-old Astroturf field today to make room for a parking lot. According to Joseph Yanchik, "the new spaces are sorely needed to accommodate the soaring commuter population at Loyola."

The 1000 space lot will completely replace the field which is commonly referred to as "an eyesore."

While the move is ideal for commuters, athletes are skeptical. "Where the hell are we going to practice?" commented an irate soccer player.

Dean Yanchik responded to his inquiry by saying that all sports teams will practice on the Dell field, otherwise known as the Dell rubble.

"The Dell is an ideal spot. It is a central location with roads on campus defining Commuters wait anxiously as the athletic field is cleared to make way for more parking. Teachers wait anxiously for commuters to finally be on time for classes.

clear boundaries," said Yanchik. "The players will love it," he predicted.

Chris Buck, President of the Commuter Students Association, was thrilled with the parking expansion. "It's great," said Buck.

Construction of the new facility is slated to be completed in one week. A dedication ceremony, to be highlighted by the unveiling of a statue dedicated to the CSA president, is planned.

to do to Hopkins," Dean McGuire says, "even if they won't sell us the property."

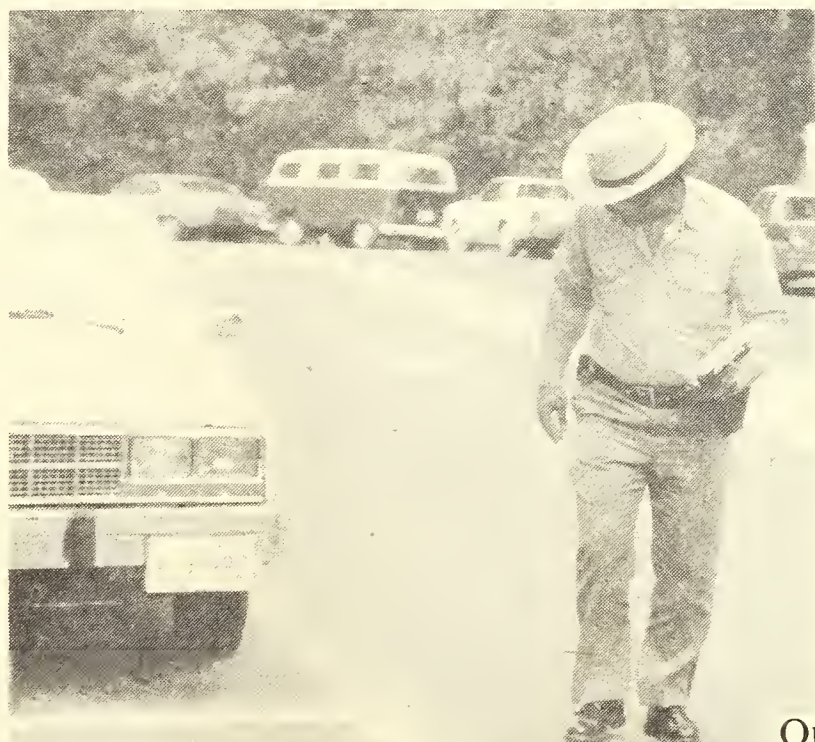

While no one at Hopkins could be reached for comment, Loyola administrators speculate that Hopkins authorities will not be pleased when an estimated 74 million tons of waste material is dumped on their property adjacent to Loyola.

Dean McGuire has raised other objections. "With a lake on campus, the students will demand a ferry service to cross it. Then we'll have to issue stickers for out-of-town students who will want to boat to school every day, or who will want to maintain private vessels in the campus port. "We'll have to create a whole new administrative department," McGuire contends.

No one is saying, by the way, where the money for Lake Sellinger is coming from, but very little has been done to promote the construction of the $5 million addition to the student center. Inside sources say that Fr. Sellinger has secretly diverted those funds towards the construction of the lake that will bear his name.

When questioned about this, Fr. Sellinger only says, "Frank always got the new toys—now see who's going to be first to get his own lake."

Guilford residents take final seat on field controversy

by Cookie Cooke

Over the past two years, Guilford residents have constantly complained about the traffic, noise, and garbage as a result of sports events held on Curley Field.

The community's latest escapade proves they are "mad as hell," and they are finally taking action. Yesterday, they attempted to steal the portable bleachers that are wheeled out of the gym before athletic events. The only problem was they were caught.

Community residents caught stealing bleachers

"Just because our project did not work this time," yelled Guilford resident, Dr. Michael Johnson, as Loyola security guards physically removed him from the Evergreen Campus, "does not mean we won't try this again. We always get our way."

According to Ron Parnell, director of security, action is being taken to prevent such episodes from reoccurring.

"I intend to have security officers sit on the bleachers at all times, even when games are not being played. The security officers have nothing else to do all day anyway," he said.

An unreliable source disclosed that the Guilford residents are, at this very moment, planning revenge on Loyola College. The source said the residents are installing parking meters in front of their homes. Only residents with parking permits will be able to park by these meters without paying. The source recommended Loyola students start saving their quarters and dimes.

"They can't get away with this," exclaimed Tim Murphy, ASLC president-elect. "We will get revenge on their revenge. We'll leave the lights on the Curley Field lit all night."

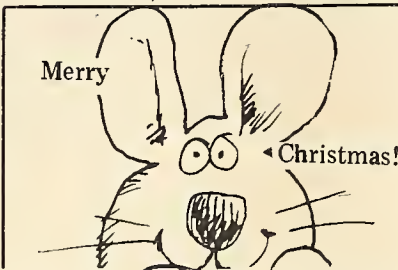

The fight between the students and the residents is not yet over.

Alpha Sigma Nu goes Mafia

by Candy Cooke

Last last night, Mark Monte, president of Alpha Sigma Nu of Loyola College, was subpoenaed to appear before the Judicial Board to answer to charges that the honor society is linked to organized crime. Suspicions were aroused when Monte was seen frequenting Little Italy and Atlantic City with pal, Frank Sinatra.

Monte, known as Mark

"Mob" Monte, or the Big "M" was reached for comment. His mama, Celeste, was livid to hear that her "bambino" would be accused of such scandal. "Maybe his Uncle Luigi or his godfather, Tony are involved with the 'family' but not my Marcus." She declined to comment further because she had to eat her pizza pies from the oven.

The Big "M" appeared at the door dressed in a dark pin-stripe suit with a white carnation. He accepted the subpoena with a sneer and muttered something unintelligible. When asked to repeat the statement, he removed a huge wad of cotton from his mouth and said, "The Mob! Just because we have come into a little money and we all drive black limousines? So we're all enrolled in violin classes; we just want a little culture, that's all. That bit about not having any people of Irish descent in the club is ridiculous. Oh by the way, it's not Alpha Sigma Nu anymore, no it stands for Associated Sicilian Ninnies.

He added, "Oh yes, we've changed our requirements—instead of loyalty to the school, scholarship, and service, it is now loyalty to the family, learning how to make cement blocks, and service to other ASN members, if you get my drift."

Monte declined to comment further as he raced to his awaiting car. He said, "I can't stay any longer, I have to take care of—I mean talk to some 4.0 ASN rejectees. Arrivederci!

We quit!

We at The Greyhound have heard a lot of complaints in the past few months.

Things like we're inaccurate, and we don't cover the right things, and the paper comes out too late, and we never include everybody's Newsbriefs, and their are two many typos . . . you get the idea.

Someone even went so far as to say we weren't worth our share of the activity fee!

Well, the staff has come to a decision. You're right.

So we're all quitting. We've all got enough clipings for our resumes anyway.

Never again will we have to hassle with late Newsbriefs or broken machines again. We can get back to the things we came here for like classes and getting drunk.

We would have made this a front page story, but we really didn't think anyone would care. Nobody reads the paper anyway, right?

We're going to donate the rest of our budget to the John Belushi Fund.

And since we really feel that The Unicorn is more widely read, we're going to donate the new machinery (which has been ordered, but isn't here yet) to them.

So anyway, you'll be seeing us in print a lot less often, and in person a lot more often.

At least until April 23.

Sex is my problem; what can I do?

Dear Editor:

I have a problem and I need help!

For protection, my father gave me a German Shepherd dog. He was a wonderful watch-dog. The evening when I was held up and robbed, he watched.

Everyone who has a dog calls him either Rover or Boy. I call mine Sex.

Now Sex turned out to be a very embarrassing name. One day I took Sex for a walk and he ran away. I spent hours looking for the dog. A cop came over to me and said, "What are you doing in this ally at 4 o'clock in the morning?"

I said, "I am looking for Sex"—my case comes up Thursday.

One day I went to City Hall to get a dog license and told the clerk, "I would like to have a license for Sex."

He said, "I would like to have one too."

Then I said, "But this is a dog," and he said he didn't care how she looked. Then I said, "You don't understand. I have had Sex since I was 2 years old," and he said, "You must have been a very strong baby."

I told him that when my wife and I separated, we went to court to fight for the custody of the dog. I said, "Your honor, I had Sex before I was married," and the judge said, "Me too."

I told them that I had Sex on T.V. He said, "Showoff!" I told him that it was a contest, and he told me I should have sold tickets.

I also told the judge about the time my wife and I were on our honeymoon, and we took the dog, Sex. When I checked into the motel, I told the clerk I wanted a room for my wife and me, and a special room for Sex. The clerk said, "Every room in the motel is for sex." Then I said, "You don't understand. Sex keeps me awake at night." And the clerk said, "Me too."

I give up!

Can you offer any advice?

Frustrated

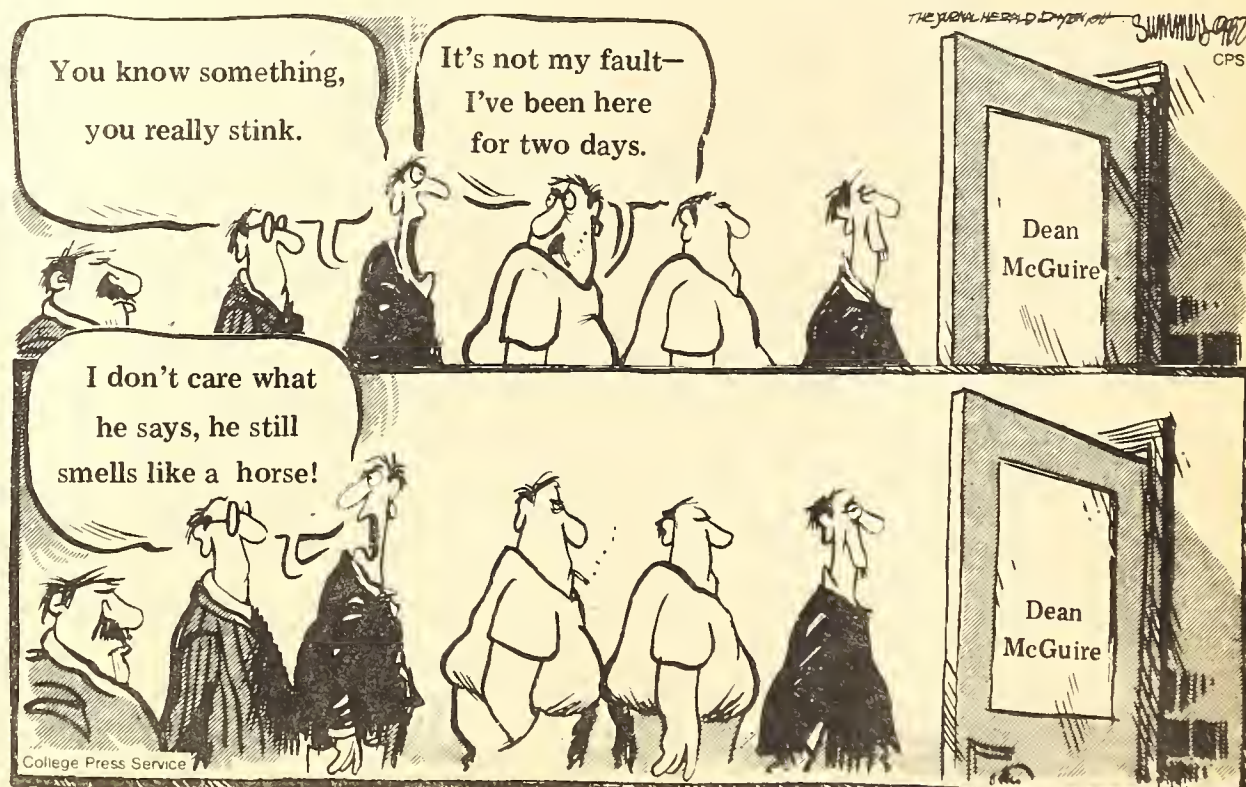

Dear Frustrated:

You obviously have severe inhibition problems, if you have problems dealing with too much sex.

From the way you describe your case, we fear that you may be incurable.

In short, your only choice is to give up sex.

Leaves Carolina after 21 years

Dean Smith to coach Greyhounds

"One of the first things I plan to do is to get the team to shoot at the correct basket," said new coach Dean Smith, who was named head man at Loyola in a surprise move yesterday.

Just three days after his North Carolina Tar Heels captured their first NCAA title, coach Dean Smith shocked the basketball world when he announced yesterday that he would accept the head coaching position at Loyola College.

The surprise announcement was made at a press conference in Baltimore. It was also announced that freshman guard Michael Jordan, who hit the winning basket in Carolina's 63-62 win over Georgetown Monday night, would transfer to Loyola.

Smith said that he decided to accept the offer made by Loyola athletic director Tom O'Connor shortly after the Tar Heel victory. "You know, I had won everything there was to win except the national championship," said Smith. "After we won Monday night I began to think, what's left for me to accomplish? So I figured I'd start all over again."

"Obviously, we're delighted to get a man of Dean's caliber for our program," said O'Connor. "The man is practically a legend. Luckily, we were able to sign him before he saw our gym."

Smith did get to see the gym—after the agreement was made. "It's...well, it's...quaint," he said. "It's a nice little barn, uh, gym. It must be even nicer when it has seats."

Loyola's Jesuit affiliation also influenced Smith to leave North Carolina after 21 years. "I figured if [coach] John Thompson could do it at Georgetown, why couldn't I do it at another Jesuit school? Besides, Schlitz really is my favorite brand of beer."

Smith replaces Bill Burke, who compiled an 11-16 record in his only year at the helm for the Greyhounds.

Burke was not available for comment, but he was seen being led out of O'Connor's office kicking and screaming. "I can so coach better than he can! At least I don't use the damn four corners!"

"Bill took it very well," said O'Connor. "He realized the situation and bowed out gracefully."

Jordan freely admitted that he transferred because of Smith. "I'll follow coach Smith wherever he goes," said Jordan. "It doesn't matter where. I haven't seen Loyola's campus yet. I don't even know where the school is. But it must be good if coach Smith thinks so. Where is the place anyway?"

As expected, Loyola players were ecstatic after hearing the news. "Dean Smith is a great coach," said guard Maurice Hicks, "and I can't wait to start practice with Jordan in the backcourt."

Freshman forward Bob Selby said, "I predict we'll be in the final four in two years. I guarantee it."

Students also seemed generally pleased with Smith's appointment. "Dean Smith? That's great!" said junior Tom Porter. "That's like Earl Weaver coming here to manage our baseball team—if we had a baseball team, that is."

To some students however, the name of Dean Smith meant little or nothing. "Dean Smith?" said junior Kenny Long. "Who the hell is that, the guy that's gonna replace Dean McGuire?"

Smith's appointment was not cause for celebration among the Jesuits at the school. "How could we hire the coach that beat a Jesuit school?" said Kevin Wildes, S.J. "I'll tell you one thing, I'm not coming to any more games until they fire that nasal-voiced idiot," he said.

Intramural playoffs to be renamed Donahoe Invitational

Anne McCloskey, head of the Loyola College intramurals program, announced yesterday that all the intramural basketball teams will qualify for the playoffs.

Prior to the announcement, the playoffs were to include only the first two teams in each division.

Mrs. McCloskey stated that the playoffs will be named the Father Donahoe Invitational Tournament in honor of the Reverend James Donahoe, S.J.

Mrs. McCloskey said that tournament rules will allow Fr. Donahoe the option to whistle the games to end or to allow the games to continue. This option will be dictated by Fr. Donahoe's need for court time for the women's team to practice. Whoever is ahead at the time of Fr. Donahoe's interruption will advance in the playoffs. When asked about the rule change jack-of-all-intramural sports John Hancock said, "I think the rule change will be great for the tournament and the games will probably start on time."

It is rumored that Fr. Donahoe will coach one of the teams in the championship game and he will be able to call off the game whenever he feels like it.

So teams, if you have a lead and Fr. Donahoe comes into the gym, go to four corners.
